The sweater was knitted on my Silver Reed SK 840 , standard electronic knitting machine, using only main bed.

For this sweater I chose not to knit any welt, I started the tuck pattern immediatly after the latch tool cast-on row. Using a garment steamer when the sweater is finished, the sweater margins can be uncurled and they will stay like this even after washing.

Neckband

After sewing the back and front at the shoulders, take the center of the front (the lowest part of the V) and the center of the back, put it on the machine by stretching the sweater as much as possible. In this way you can determine how many stitches you need for the neckband. Take it out, but remember the needles that were required to put the neck of the sweater on the machine. Arrange all the needles 2 in working position and 1 in non-working position, for the Mockrib.

Knit a few rows of waste yarn (8-9 rows) then 1 row of ravel cord. With the main yarn and Stitch Dial at 10, knit the first row. With Stitch Dial back to 7 knit 19 more rows (total 20 rows). Knit a few rows of waste yarn and take the piece out of the machine. Knit another piece exactly like this one.

The neckbands and the sweater will be joined together like so:

- Put the sweater back on the machine with the right side toward you, but be careful how you choose the stitches. Uncurl the sweater and choose the holes below the 2 strands of the margin. In the end, on the machine you should have a straight line. Push the needles all the way out - on the Hold position - in order the sweater stitches to be behind the hook of the needles.
- Put one of the pieces of the neckband on the machine. The neckband should be positioned with the ravel cord part up and the wrong side toward you (rights side of the neckband and the sweater are touching). Put the neckband exactly on the stitches it was before taking it out of the machine. The stitches should be in the hook of the needles.
- Slowly and gradually, push all the needles back into B position, so the stitches of the neckband to pass through the stitches of the sweater. Now the pieces are joined together.
- Put the other part of the neckband on the machine according to mockrib instructions. The first stitch of the neckband should go on the second stitch of the sweater, the second stitch of the neckband on the non-working needle (the third stitch of the sweater), the third stitch of the neckband on the fifth stitch of the sweater (the forth stitch of the sweater is skipped), the forth of the neckband on the sixth (the non-working needle) of the sweater and so on.
- Once all the stitches are on the machine, with the Stitch Dial at 10, knit 1 row. Cast off and repet the process with the second piece of the neckband.

If it's easier for you, follow the tutorial below to understand easily how to join the neckband with the sweater. The only difference is that I sewed the back and front and used the center of the back and the center of the front, so I can join the neckbands exactly in the center of the back, not on the side like Diana Sullivan did.
